Student council president elections

If you've seen posters around school calling for your vote, you might be wondering what they are. Well, look no further! Every year, year 13 students campaign for student council president. The student council president is in charge of coming up with new and innovative ideas to better the school, this year we had six candidates:

Leo de Lima
Lucía Ybarra
Valentina Bautista
Carlos Ramírez
Regina Márquez

The voting took place on Monday, and while the results are yet to be published, we can say we are definitely excited to see the results!

University fair

Thanks to Ms. Silvia's hard work, we were able to welcome universities from all over the world, giving our year 11, 12 and 13 students the opportunity to talk face to face with university representatives and ask important questions to help students in their decision making process.

Following this successful fair, the school library has established a "university section", with pamphlets and merchandise from the various universities we had the pleasure of hosting. If you have the time, make sure to check it out!

September was a busy month for the Edron community: from annual events such as the Mañanita Mexicana to new opportunities such as the science breakthrough contest. It's safe to say that the 2024/25 school year has started with a bang!

Mañanita mexicana

This month we had our annual Mañanita Mexicana, in celebration of Mexican independence day. With things ranging from delicious food to melodic mariachis and an incredible photo booth, we can't properly express our gratitude to the organisers of this wonderful event.

Upcoming events:

- Breakthrough competition: To enter, please speak to Mr. Harris and join the Google Classroom
- The November Fair (23rd Nov)
- Bank holiday on October 1st due to change of government
- Half-term break: Monday 28th October - Friday 1st November

Giannina Aguirre:

Learn how to study, and be organized. Participate and enjoy sports. Run as fast as you can, jump as high as you can, and don't worry if you fall.

Teamwork is like a superpower, so cheer for your friends just as much as you would for yourself.

And remember: don't try to grow up too fast, your time will come eventually but appreciate the freedom of being little while you can!

Leo Aguilar:

Don't be afraid to ask questions—questions are like magic keys that unlock new adventures! Be curious about everything, even the tiniest things, like why ants march in a line or why the sky changes colors. And always remember: making mistakes is just part of the fun. They're like stepping stones that lead you to something even better. Oh, and don't forget to laugh at least once a day—it's like a superpower that makes everything brighter!

TEACHER SPECIAL TALENT

TEACHER OUTFIT OF THE MONTH

Blackboard basics: Chemistry Couture

Bringing black back, Miss. Nathalia Bardella has been showing us her Brazilian flow every day since we came back to school! Our new chemist is dripped out in a monochromatic outfit that has everyone paying attention in class. Miss. Bardella paired some dark boots with sheer black stockings, making it a striking cross between chic and loud. On top of that, she rocked a beautiful black dress with some white flowers on it, creating some contrast that is as sharp as her chem knowledge. To top it all off, she's layered it with a black cardigan, giving a cosy, sophisticated look that is perfect for the incoming autumn weather. It's as if her outfit was curated to match the elegance of the periodic table, each piece flowing perfectly into the next! Now, all she needs to tell us is where she goes to the mol [mall]

TEACHER INTERVIEW

WITH MR. VINCENT

By Giannina Aguirre & Sofía Muñoz

In this Month's edition we had the opportunity to interview one of the new science teachers; Mr. John Vincent! This biologist talks to us about a variety of things, ranging from ice cream, to veganism, and forgiveness.

What's your favourite ice cream flavour?

Vegan mint chocolate chip because "is moai favourite" (he was chewing)

Why did you decide to study biology?

My grandfather was a butcher and had a passion for British wildlife. When he retired he led guided walks and lectures on British wildlife, and he is cited as the man who "saved the British dormouse" from extinction. It is still endangered. He worked out what different tree species they feed on, and could then advise the conservation efforts and management to include those tree species!

What's a regret you have and how can one forgive themselves or make amends?

I used to say that you shouldn't regret things because everything is a learning experience, but now I would say not fulfilling my potential at my university studies. However, I wouldn't change what happened. If someone wants to make amends and forgive themselves...I would tell them to make sure they really think about the lesson they should learn as a result, and take steps to apply that lesson. No kind words would really help. Regret is a powerful emotion: and it is one you need to work through yourself.

Why are you vegan?

It seems to me that people are vegan for three (or one of three) reasons: A vegan diet seems healthier, they're concerned about animal welfare, or they're concerned about environmental impact. I watched a film in September 2015 called Cowspiracy and it talked a lot about the environmental impact of animal agriculture, giving lots of data and studies on the impact of it. It blew my mind! The statistic that really got me was that for a "normal" persons diet, you need a piece of land for the produce and legumes; you need land to house the animals; and you also need land to grow the food to feed those animals. So, if you add up all of that land space it's eighteen times the land space needed for a vegan diet. Going vegan means there's a huge reduction of land needed. I was living in Peru at the time and that land would be in the amazon rainforest: trees would be cut down and forests would be burnt in order to make space to grow all of this. If we could just reduce that by half that would be a big impact. If the statistics are true and its one eighteenth of the land that means that over 90% of the land could be returned back to the wild.

BARCELONA VS MADRID

By Paloma Echeverría

The feud between Barcelona and Real Madrid started on the 13th of May 1902. This was over 120 years ago, that was before the Mexican revolution! And still, the rivalry between these two remains strong.

Research has shown that, generally, there is an age bias between the two teams, however in this school, it varies a bit.

In KS3 about 68% prefer Barcelona and 32% choose Real Madrid.

SCIENCE COMMITTEE

By Mr Harris

We are thrilled to extend our heartfelt congratulations to President Mariana Fernández Revilla and Vice President Mauricio Moguel Garduño on their ascension to the esteemed positions of Science Committee Presidents! Their dedication and passion for science will undoubtedly inspire our community.

Under their leadership, the Science Committee will be instrumental in fostering a vibrant scientific culture within our school. They will be organising exciting competitions and science events that encourage innovation and creativity among students. Additionally, the committee will focus on sharing the latest scientific developments, providing a platform for students to engage with real-world science.

Furthermore, Mariana and Mauricio are committed to enhancing peer tutoring programs and establishing science clubs that promote collaboration and learning. We are excited to see how their vision will enrich our school community and ignite a passion for science in all students.

Congratulations once again, Mariana and Mauricio! We look forward to your impactful leadership and the wonderful initiatives you will bring to life.

We are delighted to announce that Julián Domínguez Arroyo is the winner of our Science Photography Competition! His stunning photograph of the butterflies in our school garden, captured during the "Día de la Independencia" celebrations, truly embodies the beauty of nature and the spirit of our school community.

Julián's keen eye and artistic talent have brought to life the vibrant colours and delicate details of these enchanting creatures, reminding us of the wonders of biodiversity right in our own backyard. In recognition of his skill and scientific know-how, Julian will also receive 10 house points!

Great work, Julián! Your photograph has inspired us all and highlighted the importance of appreciating the natural world around us. We look forward to seeing more of your incredible work in the future!

Please read on for a word from Julián and his work.

"The Dione Moneta is a butterfly species that belongs to the Nymphalidae family and is found living from North Brazil to Central America and Mexico. These butterflies can be found in open spaces in diverse tropical environments where sunlight is available. This species, in particular, caught my attention because of its beautiful appearance, especially notable at the core of its wings where the color ranges from a bright and vivid orange to warm yet subtle shades of brown."

REFORM TO THE JUDICIAL POWERS IN MEXICO

By Yamila Qureshi

Within president López Obrador's last weeks in office, his proposal for a reform in judicial power has been approved by the Senate. This reform involves the abolition of the judiciary's independence from the government, as judges will now be elected by popular vote through the INE. Supporters of this reform claim this will allow the judicial system to adapt and become more accountable to the Mexican population, but critics argue that this will only strengthen the Morena political party's authority.

Within the Senate was a night of discussion and tension between its members. Few votes were needed for the majority to vote for the judicial reform, which is backed by the current president, López Obrador. The meeting was paused multiple times due to protests outside the chamber. Finally, the vote was sealed by senator Miguel Ángel Yunes, a PAN representative, and voted in favour of the reform. This allowed the reform to pass as of September 11th 2024.

As a result, judges, magistrates, and Supreme Court justices will be selected by popular elections held by the INE. The elections will take place in sections between 2025 and 2027. The number of members in the Supreme Court will also be reduced from 11 to 9 individuals. Additionally, the elected ministers will stay in their posts from 8 to 14 years after being elected, with the possibility of being reelected.

For president López Obrador, this is a major victory, as he and his proposals have previously clashed with the Supreme Court during his time in office. With this reform, Morena has greater control over the judiciary, and will likely favour their proposals even after López Obrador's six-year term is over, as Claudia Sheinbaum (from Morena) won the past June presidential elections with astonishing numbers.

HISTORY BOOK RECOMMENDATION

La casa de los espíritus is a novel written by Isabel Allende, a Chilean-American author some of you might recognise from IGCSE Spanish. It tells the generational story of a family living in Chile during the 20th Century, shining a light upon social injustices and the fight in the face of tyranny. This novel's genre is magic realism, meaning it combines elements of realism, in this case historical fiction, with elements of fantasy.

It begins with Severo and Nívea del Valle, two married liberals who fight for politics and women's rights. Their oldest daughter, Rosa, is engaged to a man from the lower class called Esteban Trueba, while Clara's, the youngest, story is the main element of fantasy as she possesses the ability to interact with spirits. A tragedy occurs when Rosa is murdered – we see the family fall apart, drifting not only away from politics, but from each other.

Esteban, unable to cope with Rosa's death, runs away to his family's abandoned Hacienda, Las Trés Marías, and brings it back to life. In this moment we follow him through a gruesome character arc, which is in accordance with how some men abused their power, specifically over women, during this century in Chile. When he returns to the del Valle's house, he marries Clara. They move to Las Trés Marías and have three children: Blanca, Jaime, and Nicolás.

This family faces many challenges, but one of the greatest disagreements comes from politics. Clara, coming from a liberal family, is a socialist herself, and this becomes even more evident when the first socialist president, Salvador Allende, wins the elections. But Esteban is conservative and he pursues a career as a conservative politician until Pinochet overthrows Allende's government and another tragedy occurs; his son, Jaime, is murdered for his socialist views.

The final generation we follow is only Nicolás' daughter, Alba. Just like her father and grandmother, she is a liberal. She and her husband, Miguel, are activists in the battles against Pinochet's reign. Miguel signs up for the guerilla warfare, and Alba provides a shelter for other activists being chased by the government.

The mixture of historical fiction and fantasy is a marvellous way of captivating the reader while portraying the horrors of Chile's political polarisation and Pinochet's authoritarian reign. Though the presidents aren't mentioned much, this book provides the perspective of a wealthy dysfunctional family growing during an era of political change and violence. Pinochet's presidency is especially remembered for the public and announced violence against socialists or anyone who showed a dislike for him and support for Allende. For this, I would recommend this book to people 15 or older as it does contain graphic portrayal of this violence. Yet, it is an enthralling way to learn about Chile's history with hints of philosophical and spiritual aspects, which are often seen in Isabel Allende's literature.

The ethics of MMA: Cruelty or culture

A discussion of the ethics in MMA through philosophical theory

By Sofia Muñoz

Mixed martial arts (referred to as MMA) is a form of combat which stems from a variety of combat sports, namely: jiu-jitsu, boxing, wrestling, and Muay Thai. It has roots in the ancient Greek sport pankration, but only emerged in the modern world in the 1990s. MMA, like the sports it is based on, provides the audience with a thrilling, strong act that entails bloodshed and both physical and emotional hardship. However, it differs from any other sport because the goal is literally to incapacitate your opponent, meaning that it becomes much more merciless than its counterparts—even sports like boxing. And yet, despite this violent—even cruel—nature, people love to watch it and participate in it. But should this really be allowed as a mainstream sport?

On one hand, MMA is an internationally recognized sport. It combines multiple, very well-respected disciplines and has allowed athletes to build whole careers out of it. Crucially, all the athletes that participate in it are aware of this violence and the danger they take on if they practise MMA, yet most do not seem to be deterred by this. This means that one of the strongest arguments MMA has is that, above all, there is autonomy; a critical idea presented by one of the most important moral philosophers of all time, Immanuel Kant. Kant believed that respecting individuals' autonomy is a cornerstone of ethical behaviour. People are rational agents capable of making informed decisions about their own lives. By respecting their autonomy, we honour their capacity to choose their own path.

Moreover, MMA's strict regulations and rules reflect a contractarian ethical approach, rooted in the social contract theories of philosophers like Thomas Hobbes and John Locke. Under this framework, society creates agreements to maintain order and protect individuals from harm. By adhering to these agreed-upon standards, MMA operates as a controlled environment where violence is not chaotic but instead follows a mutually accepted code. This contract ensures that the fighters' safety is prioritised while maintaining fairness and respect for the sport.

However, it is important to recognize how undignifying and humiliating MMA is. It strips the person of their dignity and their health. Kant believed that humans should never be treated merely as a means to an end, but always as ends in themselves (his second categorical imperative). MMA, however, centres around a sport where fighters are essentially used as instruments of entertainment, with their well-being often compromised for the sake of the spectacle. Even if fighters consent to this, Kant might argue that allowing humans to injure each other for public amusement violates their intrinsic worth.

Martha Nussbaum, a modern philosopher known for her work in the capabilities approach and human development, would raise concerns about how MMA fails to respect the dignity and vulnerability of the human body, and MMA is essentially incompatible with respect for the other.

A lot of social theories, like the feminist theory and the marxist theory, would also argue that the fighters in MMA, often coming from marginalised backgrounds, are commodified, with their bodies and health sacrificed for the entertainment industry. This could be seen as a form of economic coercion, where athletes feel they have no other choice but to fight for survival or success in a world that offers them few alternatives. From this perspective, the consent of fighters could be questioned—are they truly free to make this choice, or are they driven to it by socioeconomic forces beyond their control? MMA undoubtedly encourages a moral vice—the enjoyment of violence for entertainment. Even if athletes train rigorously and show discipline, the sport's foundation on physical violence could encourage spectators to find pleasure in watching others suffer.

Overall, while MMA may not be alone as a violent sport, it does not take away from the fact that it is unethical. It leads to a banality that erodes moral sensitivity, strips the humanity of the athletes in the eyes of the competition and the audience, and essentially provides a fast and easy way of ruining the athlete's health and capabilities. How can causing severe brain damage be ethical?

BOOK OF THE MONTH

The Hobbit

In September of 1973 one of the greatest authors of all time died at the age of 81. I'm talking about J.R.R.Tolkien. He gave life to Middle Earth where most of his books were situated. To commemorate his death, The Lion's Eye decided to make the book of the month one of his greatest adventures: The Hobbit.

The Hobbit is a fantasy book which tells the story of Bilbo Baggins, a hobbit. He lived calmly in his hobbit-hole until the Old Grey Wizard, Gandalf, visited him. Gandalf talked to him about an adventure, but Bilbo was not convinced of that being a good idea. Next day, Bilbo, who was preparing tea, got a big surprise as some dwarves were at his door, expecting food. Gandalf arrived a bit later and explained himself saying that he invited them to talk about the adventure. Bilbo, freaked out, was not sure if he wanted to participate in this adventure, still he gave the dwarves something to eat.

After a while the dwarves decide to start talking about the planning of this adventure. They started to call Bilbo "The Thief". Bilbo thought he did not understand something but he said nothing. The goal of the adventure was to recover what once belonged to the dwarves. The dwarf leader, Thorin Oakenshield explained that they were going to steal back a treasure that long ago a dragon stole from them and that he was going to be the one to steal it. At that moment, Bilbo fainted.

He woke up the next morning with a note on a table. The dwarves were gone and if he wanted to go on the adventure he needed to catch up with them in 15 minutes. Bilbo ran out of his hobbit-hole into one of the greatest adventures of all time.

This is a great book as it gives you a detailed image of what is happening in each scene. The exceptional writing of Tolkien will never bore you. The Hobbit also teaches us to let go of what is in the past and try something new. I think you'll love it.

Billie Eilish's HIT ME HARD AND SOFT third studio album released on the 17th of May, 2024. The album was co-written with her brother, Finneas O'Connell. It contains a total of 10 tracks:

1. SKINNY
2. LUNCH
3. CHIHIRO
4. BIRDS OF A FEATHER
5. WILDFLOWER
6. THE GREATEST
7. L'AMOUR DE MA VIE
8. THE DINER
9. BITTERSUITE
10. BLUE

According to Genius: Lyrics and Song Finder, the most streamed song on the album is LUNCH, with a total of 1.5 million views on the site. The album touches themes of queer love, body image, self growth, between others. Currently, the single "BIRDS OF A FEATHER" is sitting on the Billboard Hot 100 at comfortable place #6. The album has been a general great success for both siblings.

The accompanying tour, appropriately named "HIT ME HARD AND SOFT, THE TOUR" starts off on the 29th of September in Québec. She currently does not have any tour dates for Mexico.

My personal favourite track is L'AMOUR DE MA VIE, I find it to have a very catchy and enjoyable beat. The lyricism of the song has compelling storytelling that is easy to follow. If you have not already, I personally strongly recommend giving it a listen. As a long term Billie Eilish fan, I find that this is one of her strongest works and is definitely not one to miss out on!

HOROSCOPES FOR SEPTEMBER

Aries:

September's like a rollercoaster, Aries, and you're the one in the front seat screaming, hands up! It's all about the vibe this month—you're full speed ahead. You're on fire, but maybe slow down before you burn out like the battery on your phone after a TikTok marathon. Friend drama? You'll squash it like a bug, but remember, not everyone can keep up with your pace. Balance out that turbo energy with some chill days, like a phone on airplane mode—everyone needs a recharge.

Taurus:

Taurus, September's got you feeling like a soft, cozy blanket on a rainy day. You're vibing with autumn as it rolls in, ready to bake cookies, light candles, and pretend to read that book you've had for months. But wait—surprise! Life's about to throw you a curveball, like when your Wi-Fi drops during a Zoom call. Don't stress, though. Just roll with it, because you're basically the human version of a warm cup of tea—calm, comforting, and maybe a little too obsessed with that new fall playlist.

Gemini:

Gemini, you're like a group chat blowing up with notifications—everywhere at once, and you love it. September's energy has you juggling a million things, but somehow, you're slaying it all. Your ideas are popping off like fireworks, but careful not to overwhelm your friends with your “shower thoughts” (you know, the ones that sound genius at 2 AM but make zero sense by morning). Take a deep breath, stay hydrated, and maybe try finishing one thing before starting 10 new ones.

Cancer:

September feels like watching the end of your favorite Netflix show—bittersweet, Cancer. You're caught up in all the feels, but in the best way. Relationships are like marshmallows: sometimes gooey and sweet, sometimes a hot mess. If things get messy, remember—you're tougher than you think. Keep an eye on that family group chat, though. Something unexpected could pop up, and it's got “plot twist” written all over it.

Leo:

Leo, you're strutting into September like it's your runway, and no one can tell you otherwise. You're basically a walking exclamation point this month, full of confidence and charisma. People are drawn to you like moths to a flame (or like you to a mirror). But don't let that star power go to your head—stay humble, or at least pretend to. You've got big things ahead, just make sure to share the spotlight. Otherwise, your friends might start hiding from your Insta stories.

Virgo:

September has Virgo energy written all over it—like a perfectly color-coded planner. This is your time to shine, baby! You're getting stuff done while everyone else is still trying to figure out where summer went. People are going to be looking at you like you're some sort of productivity wizard, but remember, even wizards need a break. Take a breather and let yourself chill for once. You deserve it, like that extra scoop of ice cream you pretend to feel guilty about.

Libra:

Libra, September feels like trying to pick an outfit for picture day—so many choices, so little time! You're craving balance but can't decide what to focus on, so you end up scrolling through memes instead. It's all good, though. This month is about finding your rhythm, like a playlist that finally clicks after skipping a few songs. Relationships might feel like a dance-off, but you'll find your groove and steal the show. Just don't trip over your own feet!

Scorpio:

Scorpio, you're like that mysterious kid at school who knows everyone's secrets but never spills a word. September's got your energy dialed up to 100, but instead of exploding, you're all about the silent power moves. People are watching you, curious and maybe a little scared (in a good way). You're plotting something epic, like a Netflix-worthy twist. Just make sure you're plotting good things, not revenge. Karma's a thing, and you're better than that.

Sagittarius:

September's like an adventure map for you, Sagittarius, and you're the one drawing the path. You're feeling wild and free, like a kite on a windy day, but don't forget—kites need strings to stay grounded. You're itching to break free from routines and explore new stuff (road trip, anyone?). Just don't ghost your responsibilities completely. Keep that YOLO spirit alive, but maybe finish your homework first. Freedom is sweeter when you've earned it.

Capricorn:

Capricorn, September's got you feeling like a boss at a work meeting—organized, in control, and maybe a little over it. You're out here making moves while everyone else is still in snooze mode. But, hey, don't be afraid to step away from the grind for a bit. Even CEOs need a weekend off. Your friends might be begging for your attention like your phone blowing up with notifications, so throw them a bone and hang out. You don't want to be the person who's “too busy” for fun.

Aquarius:

Aquarius, you're basically an internet meme come to life this month—quirky, unpredictable, and hilarious. September's got you vibing with your weirdness, and honestly, people are loving it. You're out here making everyone laugh with your random comments, but remember to keep it real. You might feel like you're floating through a galaxy of ideas, but don't forget to check in with planet Earth now and then. Friends will appreciate your head-in-the-clouds moments, as long as you don't forget about the group chat entirely.

Pisces:

Pisces, September's like a dream you don't want to wake up from—soft, hazy, and full of feels. You're living in a world of emotions this month, like a mood playlist on shuffle. Sometimes it's chill lo-fi, sometimes it's dramatic movie soundtrack. Your intuition is on point, and you're sensing things before they even happen, like some kind of mind reader. Use that superpower wisely, and maybe keep a journal. Oh, and don't forget to hydrate—tears or no tears, you need water, like, all the time.
